BA/C/3/33/6	The County Court cases between Mr Amos and Barrow Corporation, for dismissal due to insubordination, and claim of wages owed.	Mr Amos, a sergeant at Anson street Police Station, who lives in a police house next door, receives a report that his wife had been disorderly, and had been reported as such by a neighbour. Chief Constable Foll asks for assurances that this behaviour will not continue, or they will have to leave their home. Mr Amos sees this as a baseless charge, and begins a letter writing strategy, alleging this is part of a deliberate campaign, that he has been rejected for advancement in favour of someone else, and he is blocked from changing police stations to Newbarns. The charge becomes one of insubordination, as he begins to also accuse the Watch Committee of corruption. In September 1887, he is removed from Anson Street, and takes up residence in the police station at 109 Rawlinson Street. On the 21st of June, 1887, he is ordered to hand in his uniform, leave the force, and 109 Rawlinson Street.
